Buckets o'
FUN

Congratulations to myMonkeymoo on their newest addition: Monkey Buckets! The soft storage solution is just right for containing odds and ends in the nursery, and it can also be hung over a stroller handle when out and about to keep those frequently needed items within reach. We'll take one in every pattern, please!

LIFE OF DAD

GOT HEART?

During this month of love, there's a whole community of folks out there hard at work raising awareness of their precious little heart heroes.

Congenital Heart Defect (CHD) Awareness Week begins February 7. According to the American Heart Association, congenital heart defects are America's number one birth defect—nearly 1 of every 125 babies is born with a CHD.

I share this important information because our daughter is part of that 1 percent. Barbara was diagnosed with a CHD when my wife was only 18 weeks pregnant. At just 3 days old, our little girl needed open-heart surgery to save her life. Thanks to the incredible team at Children's Hospital Los Angeles, our daughter is now thriving. In fact, we're blessed and grateful to be celebrating her first birthday this month. Happy birthday, Babs!

In an effort to spread the word about CHDs and support medical research, my website (lifeofdad.com) features the story of a brave CHD-fighting child in a monthly fundraiser called Tiny Heart Superheroes. Donations go directly to the Saving Tiny Hearts Society, an organization whose mission is to raise money for the grossly underfunded lifesaving research of CHDs.

This Valentine's Day, remember these Tiny Heart Superheroes who, even though their hearts may be broken, have more love to give to this world than you could ever imagine.

If you want to nominate a Tiny Heart Superhero, visit lifeofdad.com/dadity.
